Q60. As you may know, Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama each have a proposal to help homeowners with subprime mortgages who are in danger of losing their homes because of higher interest rates. Clinton would impose a 90 -day halt on foreclosures for homeowners with subprime mortgages and a freeze on adjustable subprime rates for at least five years. Obama says those measures would drive up interest rates. He proposes tax credits for homeowners and a fund to help people refinance, as well as penalties for lenders who gave mortgages to people who could not afford them. Which proposal do you prefer: A moratorium on foreclosures and a OR rate freeze, or tax credits and funding to help people refinance?
