Ipsos/McClatchy Poll

NOTE: all results shown are percentages unless otherwise labeled.

These are some of the findings of an Ipsos poll conducted May 6-9, 2010. For the survey, a nationally representative, randomly selected sample of exactly 1,016 adults aged 18 and older across the United States was interviewed by Ipsos. With a sample of this size, the results are considered accurate within 3.07 percentage points, 19 times out of 20, of what they would have been had the entire adult population in the U.S. been polled. All sample surveys and polls may be subject to other sources of error, including, but not limited to coverage error, and measurement error. These data were weighted to ensure that the sample's composition reflects that of the actual U.S. population according to U.S. Census figures. Respondents had the option to be interviewed in English or Spanish.

POLITICAL TRACKER

1. Generally speaking, would you say things in this country are heading in the right direction, or are they off on the wrong track?

Arizona Immigration Law

7. As you may know, the state of Arizona recently passed a new law that once police stop a person, requires local law enforcement officials to verify the immigration status of people they reasonably suspect of being in the country illegally. Do you strongly favor, somewhat favor, somewhat oppose or strongly oppose this new Arizona State law.

9. Under this new law, it is possible that anyone in Arizona who has made contact with an officer can be asked to verify their immigration status. Some people have said that they wouldn't mind being asked to verify their own status if it means that immigration laws are being enforced. Other people say that this is a violation of their rights and would be upset if they were stopped and asked to verify their status. Which of these comes closer to your own personal view?
